The Road to Zuni: A documentary about Triloki Nath Pandey

Road to Zuni is a documentary about Professor Emeritus Triloki Pandey of the Department of Anthropology, and his work with the Zuni Tribe of New Mexico.

Loki’s story begins in a small village in India, takes him through the famed University of Chicago anthropology department, to years of living with the historically private Zuni tribe of New Mexico. Against all odds, Pandey's court testimony helps force the U.S. to recognize the Zuni way of life and pay $50 million in settlements for injustices perpetrated on the people.

This film has been selected and screened at the WRPN Women’s International Film Festival (2019); Gallup Film Festival (2018); Action on Film MegaFest (2018); American Indian Film Festival (2018); Kolkata Shorts International Film Festival (Certificate of Excellence, 2018); Gallup Film Festival (2018); and Tribal Film Festival

Running time: 33 Minutes, followed by questions and discussion

Director and producer Annapurna Pandey serves as a lecturer with the Department of Anthropology at UC Santa Cruz.